LIMS-plus® Laboratory Information Management System Links Evidence Tracking in AFP Forensic laboratories throughout Australia

Mesa, AZ, March 15, 2007 – JusticeTrax, Inc., a leading provider of software solutions for the criminal justice professional, today announced that the Australian Federal Police (AFP), Australia's international law enforcement and policing agency, has selected JusticeTrax LIMS-plus® to automate and integrate evidence tracking, analytical results and case management for its forensic laboratories. JusticeTrax LIMS-plus has an established track record of success, ease of integration and an ability to track, manage and consolidate forensic evidence as it flows through a forensic laboratory.

Implementation of LIMS-plus will allow analysts to collaborate and assess the status of evidence in a real-time environment.

Before deciding to purchase LIMS-plus, the AFP contacted and visited several North American laboratories using JusticeTrax, and then conducted an exhaustive proof-of-concept study in Canberra.

JusticeTrax's LIMS-plus software is a modern information system that delivers a broad spectrum of historical and real-time data and analysis for forensic evidence that has been collected and transferred into lab. Designed by forensic scientists, JusticeTrax LIMS-plus offers comprehensive case management, integrating evidence tracking, analytical results and lab management information to provide a clear view of the examination process.

“We're pleased to be a part of the Australian Federal Police's mission to provide excellent analysis and testing of forensic evidence,” said Simon Key, co-founder and CEO of JusticeTrax. “Their mission statement reflects our shared desire to take no shortcuts when dealing with evidence where a person's freedom is at stake.”
